WHEN LOVE CAME HOME

By Frank L. Stanton in The Atlanta Constitution.

When Love came Home where Memory, with the years, Clashed hands with Grief and gave the Dark her tears, Sorrow rose singing from the grave of Loss...

Love knew the way, and sure and sweet he came The bitter cross even as the kiss to claim; And murmured in that moment crowned and blest: "I, too, have wandered with a wounded breast!"

No more the thorn-ways of the Night to roam, Sweetheart, when Love came Home.

THE GRAVEST OF OUR COUNTRY'S NEEDS

By Edith M. Thomas of The Vigilantes

I take it, that the "graves of our country's needs" is not so much "graveyards" in the military sense, though here the need is sufficiently great as the preparation of the world for the coming of the "new day"...

It will be seen that if the publicity which has been given to the fact that these three days are correct the Boston Public Garden for the first time in its history...
